-0-

by John Petrenka in the October 4, 2011 issue

In the realm of nothingness there are no boundaries. Circumferences do not exist, there is no middle. Horizons are broad, never reached. The stillness frightens yet calmness abides. Unheard—harmonic sounds linger, echo-like, sensed as an undertow in an ocean's depth —a Siren's call. In the realm of nothingness there are no boundaries, It is a birthing place.

Read "After" and "Matins."