

Moravians in 13 states to ordain gay clergy

by Yonat Shimron in the July 23, 2014 issue

The Northern Province of the Moravian Church in North America approved a proposal allowing the ordination of gay and lesbian people—whether single, married, or in covenanted relationships—and calling for the creation of a rite for same-sex covenants.

By a vote of 181-62, delegates to the province's 2014 synod approved a proposal June 22 that also includes provisions to revise the Northern Province's Book of Order to reflect the changes.

"Moravians understand that God's call to us is to welcome all people, because God's embrace is far larger than our capacity to imagine," said Elizabeth D. Miller, president of the Provincial Elders' Conference of the Moravian Church Northern Province.

This decision affects only those churches in the Northern Province, the largest of Moravian provinces in the United States and Canada.

Four years ago, the province's synod mandated congregational forums for dialogue and prayer about the ordination and pastoral service of gays and lesbians in the church.

During an earlier session at this year's synod, delegates approved a resolution that affirmed the Northern Province's commitment to be inclusive of differing views regarding gay and lesbian ordination.

Based in Bethlehem, Pennsylvania, the Northern Province includes more than 21,000 members in 93 congregations in New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Ohio, Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Minnesota, Wisconsin, North Dakota, California, Ontario, Alberta, and Washington, D.C.

The Moravian Church was founded by Jan Hus, who was burned at the stake in 1415 for his criticism of the Roman Catholic Church.

Moravians, who are so called because of their origin in the Moravia and Bohemia regions of the Czech Republic, arrived in America in the early 1700s and built their first permanent settlement in Bethlehem in eastern Pennsylvania.

“We know that there are Moravians who deeply love God, who honor the authority of scripture and love the Moravian Church, who do not agree with this resolution,” said Miller. “It is my prayer that as Moravians, in relationship with one another, we can continue to walk together in love, even as we acknowledge our differences.”

The worldwide Moravian Church consists of 21 provinces with more than 1 million members, half of whom live in Africa. —RNS

This article was corrected on August 6, 2014, to clarify that the decision allowed single and partnered gay men and lesbians to be ordained.