

Monday digest

April 2, 2012

Subscribe by RSS feed: magazine, blogs, news. See all feeds.

New today from the Century:

- William McKinney surveys the American-religion surveys: "The Census Bureau avoids collecting data about religion. So most of what we know is based on what people reveal to independent researchers." (subscription required)
- Steve Thorngate on showing up for Holy Week
- Barbara Cawthorne Crafton blogs the Easter Sunday lectionary
- John Petrakis reviews the film A Separation (subscription required)

In the news:

- Religious leaders press Village Voice on sex ads
- Vatican wants to revive church's role in fighting the Mafia
- After Trayvon Martin case, churches say 'stereotypes cost lives'
- One Psalm, two causes, two meanings
- Scottish churches combat soaring metal theft