

Tuesday digest

July 10, 2012

Subscribe by RSS feed: magazine, blogs, news. See all feeds.

New today from the Century:

- ◦ John Buchanan on friendship at the Association of Theological Schools:
"What is it about theological educators that allows them to get along with civility and respect in spite of wide theological diversity?" (subscription required)
- ◦ Steve Thorngate on "the middle class," population almost everyone:
"Obama's tax proposal is good short-term policy and smart politics. But it irks me every time I hear him define the middle class so expansively."
- ◦ MaryAnn McKibben Dana on why her kid won't swim the Olympics
- ◦ Jennifer Moland-Kovash's lectionary column for Sunday, July 22
(subscription required)
- ◦ A brief review of Imago Dei, a collection of poems edited by Century poetry editor Jill Peláez Baumgaertner

In the news:

- The Vatican blames market decline for \$20 million deficit

- Study: Pastors' concerns for others may harm their own health