

Thursday digest

August 23, 2012

Subscribe by RSS feed: magazine, blogs, news. See all feeds.

New today from the Century:

- David Heim offers a wrap-up of the Century's "gospel in seven words" project: "The Century asked 23 authors to boil Christian proclamation down to just a few words. What is the essence of the essence of Christianity?"
- Lee Hull Moses on not being afraid: "As I grow older, I'm increasingly scared of heights. But there I was with my four-year-old in front of a three-story water slide."
- Karl Giberson reviews Alvin Plantinga: "Alvin Plantinga posits a profound conflict between naturalism and science. This extraordinary claim is deeply counterintuitive." (subscription required)
- James McGrath on the conflict between inerrancy and literalism

In the news:

- The roots of Rep. Todd Akin's "legitimate" rape remarks
- Conservative groups release survey on religious hostility