The most popular Century articles

December 26, 2012

Here are the Century magazine articles that were most popular online this year. Thanks for reading.

- 1) The gospel in seven words, by David Heim. "The Century asked 23 authors to boil Christian proclamation down to just a few words. What is the essence of the essence of Christianity?"
- 2) The Bible plus, by Kathleen Flake. "The LDS canon's four books carry equal weight of authority. All are read as historical witnesses to God's promise of salvation."
- This just isn't working, by LeeAnne Watkins. "Our church tried endless varieties of adult ed opportunities and midweek services, but people didn't come. So we canceled them—all of them."
- 4) The new black theology, by Jonathan Tran. "When black theologians focused on nontraditional and extra-Christian sources, white theologians had an excuse to ignore them. Not anymore."
- 5) Fit for ministry, by Amy Frykholm. "Being a pastor is bad for your health. The Clergy Health Initiative aims to study this problem and begin to correct it."
- 6) The absurd in worship, by Thomas G. Long. "I recently learned that 'Onward Christian Soldiers' can speak truth—when it's not a display of militarism but just patently ridiculous."
- 7) New clergy, new churches, by Jesse James DeConto. "Emily Scott had an idea: what if young adults got together for a weekly agape feast? Soon St. Lydia's was born—but Scott was not ordained."

- 8) Saved by fiction, by Deborah Smith Douglas. "Reading fiction has done more to baptize my imagination, inform my faith and strengthen my courage than any prayer technique has."
- 9) Courage to date, interview with Kerry Cronin. "I once asked a panel of students about relationships—were they seeing anyone? Did they feel like they had to break up before graduation? They looked at me as if I had been speaking Greek."
- 10) Who is communion for? by Charles Hefling. "Offering the elements to the unbaptized can be seen as a development and not a revolution, but it is a significant change. Is it a good one?"
- 11) Culture changers, interview with David Hollinger. "Ecumenical leaders of the 1960s took a series of risks, asking their constituency to follow them in directions that many resisted."
- 12) Unnecessary roughness, by Benjamin J. Dueholm. "A sociologist might see in football a society's need to control and ritualize violence. The church fathers, however, weren't much for sociologists."
