

Other people saying things

By Steve Thorngate

May 28, 2015

"No matter what an officer has done to a black person, that officer can always cover himself in the running narrative of heroism, risk, and sacrifice that is available to a uniformed police officer by virtue of simply reporting for duty."

"I can't listen to you any more. I can only listen to my elders."

"They feel contemporary. They come out of the ice just as they went in."

"If they turn out to agree on some large questions of policy — and disagree with the party establishment on those same questions — might the establishment actually take notice? Might Hillary Clinton herself?"

"I have no idea whether the Duggar children are happy or not, but I know that if they are unhappy they aren't allowed to express it, especially for the TV cameras."

"The deep pessimism and sweeping indictment of modern politics associated with this version of the Benedict Option resembles nothing so much as the 19th-century arguments of anti-liberal French Catholics."

"Ultimately, the anecdote was more compelling than the real attribution."

"There's no, like, depictions of Troy being sacked in the background or a bunch of possums trying to read the Septuagint to muddy the plot here. Trees, house, saint, babe. That's all I need."