

Carbon footprint

by Bonnie Thurston in the September 8, 2009 issue

Mine is reasonably small having always lived low, turned off lights and faucets, eschewed useless stuff, reused, recycled.
I do not aspire to shrink it, but, like the first people in these green hills,

I want to leave
no footprint at all,
to move through life in gentle, charitable silence not disturbing fragile things, cosmic balances or the universal pulse so that, when my candle sputters into darkness, the tiniest leaf is unmoved by the wisp of its rising smoke.
