

The coil of prayer

by Luci Shaw in the January 22, 2014 issue

Count on the faith that links us as we pray, about odd things in each other's lives, nothing ruinous —a lost ring, an aching tooth. Even a request that we forget after a casual pledge: I'll be sure to pray for you, words spoken as we chat at the store —they form a filament of gold, forged in heaven, that loops around us.
Even careless phrases spoken through air hold firm, are heard, and may be answered. A cough that won't give up, a missing check, a migraine that suspends us, waiting, held in the loop of prayer.
