

Autumn

by Warren L. Molton in the October 28, 2015 issue

Oh, that's a Pignut Hickory, she says, showing off,
and pointing to a great splash of yellow and green.
One lonely cedar stands tall in its own climate of ripe
fall fragrance you want to keep on your fingers
as you break its seed with your nail.
An oak still green with one small spray of tan,
as though to say impatiently, I know, I know.
Just wait.