After the fact

by Donovan McAbee in the April 13, 2016 issue

I know you by the space you leave empty.

I draw lines in the air where the roof used to be.

I wait for you, Lord, like a mailbox for a letter.

The grass still wonders how the ground got there.