

9/11: Ten years later

Feature in the August 23, 2011 issue

The burning World Trade Center towers as seen from the Greenpoint neighborhood in Brooklyn. Attribution Some rights reserved by Pennington

To mark the anniversary of 9/11, we asked five Century contributors to reflect on the attacks and the decade that followed. Here are their responses:

- Scott Bader-Saye, a teacher at the Episcopal Seminary of the Southwest and author of Following Jesus in a Culture of Fear
- Michael Lindvall, pastor of the Brick Presbyterian Church in New York; his books include The Good News from North Haven
- Stephen Paul Bouman, executive director of Evangelical Outreach and Congregational Mission for the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America and author of Grace All Around Us: Embracing God's Promise in Tragedy and Loss
- Robin Lovin, professor of ethics at Southern Methodist University, who recently wrote Christian Realism and the New Realities

- John Paul Lederach, professor of international peacebuilding at the University of Notre Dame and author of The Moral Imagination: The Art and Soul of Building Peace