

Wednesday digest

November 16, 2011

Subscribe by RSS feed: magazine, blogs, news. See all feeds.

New today from the Century:

- Amy Frykholm on Leymah Gbowee: "If Martin Luther King Jr. had written a book exposing his personal failings, it would have been seen as undermining his cause. But Leymah Gbowee does not want to be thought of as a hero." (subscription required)
- Frykholm talks to Gbowee for the blog
- Shaun Casey reviews James P. Bailey: "James Bailey has written a superb, creative and timely book whose primary audience should be the U.S. Congress. Unfortunately, the current members of Congress do not seem to possess the intellectual wattage necessary to profit from it." (subscription required)

In the news:

- Catholics to launch shelter for Anglicans on Jan. 1
- Benetton pulls pope-kissing ad
- Sexual abusers hard to profile or predict