Monday digest

November 28, 2011

Subscribe by RSS feed: magazine, blogs, news. See all feeds.

New today from the Century:

- Barbara Brown Taylor on the redeeming darkness of Advent: "Darkness does not come from a different place than light; it is not presided over by a different God." (subscription required)
- Bill Goettler blogs the lectionary: "Sometimes I want to pretend that there are no more prophets, that the prophetic word is locked into the biblical era. But them I'm reminded of the guy on my own porch."
- Steve Thorngate on the new Muppets movie: "Years ago I cringed when I saw that the Onion sells a t-shirt with the slogan, 'I appreciate the Muppets on a much deeper level than you.' My friend John and I had just been discussing the Muppets' sly use of metafictional elements."

In the news:

- Pope Benedict XVI slapped with charges for not wearing seat belt
- Pope: Others should be held to same abuse 'standards'
- Tunisia a test for what 'moderate' Islam looks like
- Faith groups in Kenya seek to strengthen HIV/AIDS strategies