

Wednesday digest

January 18, 2012

Subscribe by RSS feed: magazine, blogs, news. See all feeds.

New today from the Century:

- Frederick Niedner on depression: "Sometimes I wish the Gospels told a story in which Jesus slumps in the shade of a tree and can't make himself face another crowd or meet one more plea for help." (subscription required)
- Steve Thorngate on a day without Wiki: "Till today, I had no idea how much I rely on Wikipedia for my day-to-day work. I imagine I'm not alone in this realization."
- John Petrakis reviews the film Young Adult, "a dark story about wasted lives and shattered dreams that coyly takes a few cheap potshots at the clueless folks who populate a small town." (subscription required)
- Lil Copan on Jim Hood's artwork (subscription required)

In the news:

- Supreme Court declines to review prayer case
- Pressler denies Santorum endorsement was rigged