

Tuesday digest

January 31, 2012

Subscribe by RSS feed: magazine, blogs, news. See all feeds.

New today from the Century:

- Stephen Ray reviews James Cone: "My great-grandfather was lynched. The imprint of this and the communal denial in the small southern town that is our homeland have had lasting reverberations for generations of my family. Few African Americans are more than a few degrees removed from a similar narrative."
- Amy Frykholm on Occupy Chicago, Rahm Emanuel and the G8 summit
- David Lose's lectionary column for Sunday, February 12 (subscription required)
- Adam Copeland on faith in the oval office

In the news:

- Study says U.S. Muslims don't want Shariah, either
- On eve of Darwin's birthday, states take steps to limit evolution
- N.J. governor defends remarks on civil rights