

Wednesday digest

February 29, 2012

Subscribe by RSS feed: magazine, blogs, news. See all feeds.

New today from the Century:

- Frank Honeycutt on the long path to reconciliation: "Like Jacob and Esau, my mother and my aunt met each other one day after 20 years of estrangement." (subscription required)
- Eric Wilson on his response to a gory Passion play: "Is exaggerated violence in Passion plays merely a product of our baser natures? Or does the savagery actually have a proper place in the crucifixion's meaning?" (subscription required)
- Diane Roth on the meaning of the word "missionary"
- Steve Thorngate on quotes from the 1 percent
- "Broken best," a poem by Bonnie Thurston

In the news:

- Experts say Quran burning 'tailor-made' for Taliban
- Mormons, GOP didn't always get along so well
- After months of wrangling, occupiers evicted from St. Paul's Cathedral
- U.S. mosque report rapid growth in past 10 years
- Franklin Graham apologizes for questioning Obama's faith