New today from the Century:

- Stephanie Paulsell goes on pilgrimage: "During spring break I made a pilgrimage. With my husband and my daughter, I traced the path Virginia Woolf took through Italy in 1908."
- John Stackhouse reviews David Martin's The Future of Christianity: "Martin describes the book as 'a modest exercise.' But don't be fooled. It is anything but. It is also not a book about the future of Christianity." (subscription required)
- "Love in a time of soundbites"--Brian Bantum blogs the lectionary
- Carol Howard Merritt on cancer and theology
