

Monday digest

July 2, 2012

Subscribe by RSS feed: magazine, blogs, news. See all feeds.

New today from the Century:

- Amy Frykholm interviews historian David Hollinger on what the mainline achieved: "Ecumenical leaders of the 1960s took a series of risks, asking their constituency to follow them in directions that many resisted."
- Steven Young reviews Carl Ernst's book on the Qur'an (subscription required)
- Douglass Key blogs the lectionary: "In my seven circuits through the lectionary, I have never written a sermon that dealt with both Mark's scene in the Nazareth synagogue and the sending of the disciples."
- Steve Thorngate on fun health-care reform links

In the news:

- Leontine T.C. Kelly, pioneering African-American woman bishop, dies at 92
- Why would Jews vandalize a Holocaust memorial?
- Christian Churches Together chooses new executive director