

Wednesday digest

July 11, 2012

Subscribe by RSS feed: magazine, blogs, news. See all feeds.

New today from the Century:

- John Turner reviews Amanda Porterfield, who "details the degree of rationalist skepticism in 1790s America—and its demise in the face of a Protestant counterattack." (subscription required)
- Amy Frykholm on e-readers and the possibility of really knowing your readers
- Steve Thorngate on what matters when you're picking a president
- Steve Vineberg briefly reviews Prometheus
- Lou Carlozo briefly reviews Introducing Sufi Fakirs of Bengal

In the news:

- Church of England postpones vote on female bishops
- Bible museum planned for Washington, D.C.
- Top church historian sees Catholic schism ahead