

Friday digest

August 10, 2012

Subscribe by RSS feed: magazine, blogs, news. See all feeds.

New today from the Century:

- Rodney Clapp on a phobia of his: "I am not squeamish about most animals or insects. But snakes are a different story." (subscription required)
- Steve Thorngate on word nerds and status anxiety
- James Sledge on waiting for God
- A brief review of the new book from Cascade on Christian nonviolence
- "Altar flowers," a poem by Mary M. Brown

In the news:

- Faith leaders urge Americans to combat attacks on religious minorities
- Nuns gather to plot response to Vatican crackdown
- For Sikhs, the soul lives on long after the body dies
- Sikh vigils greet violence with peace, food
- Do the American nuns have a future?