

Nyasha Junior on God Complex Radio

By Carol Howard Merritt

September 6, 2012

Throughout this political season, the Bible has been used in our discourse. Should this be the case? When is the Bible helpful and when is it harmful in the public square?

In the latest episode of God Complex Radio, Derrick Weston asked Nyasha Junior, a biblical scholar who teaches at Howard University's Divinity School, to help us take a closer look at how it's being used. Dr. Junior not only enlightens our perspective, but she gives church leaders helpful tools in how to lead Bible studies in light of current politics.

When you're done listening to the podcast, you can learn more about Nyasha Junior at her website or Twitter feed.

And, what's the worst political ad using biblical imagery? That honor goes to this three-and-a-half minutes of awesome: