

Thursday digest

January 10, 2013

Subscribe by RSS feed: magazine, blogs, news. See all feeds.

New today from the Century:

- Jesse James DeConto on faith-based anti-death penalty work: "Last year, Connecticut repealed the death penalty and California declined to. Americans are conflicted about capital punishment." (subscription required)
- LaVonne Neff reviews Chris Haw's book on his journey from Willow Creek back to Catholicism
- Steven Porter on visiting a Metropolitan Community Church congregation on Epiphany
- Pamela Fickenschner on the spiritual danger of alumni magazines

In the news:

- Bus ads aim to reclaim the meaning of 'jihad'
- Virtual vices show shift in American morality
- Africa rises, China falls on Christian persecution list
- 'Virtual' public schools draw interest of religious families
- British bishops resist move to allow monarch to marry a Catholic