

Wednesday digest

February 13, 2013

Subscribe by RSS feed: magazine, blogs, news. See all feeds.

New today from the Century:

- Ted Smith on making Lent difficult: "Sustainable Lenten disciplines anticipate an Easter in which they will continue. But surely Easter hope is for something more." (subscription required)
- The editors on antiscience sentiment: "Why does antiscience sentiment gain such traction in America? Conservatives deserve some blame, but so does the scientific community."
- Steve Thorngate's take on State of the Union
- "The actual you," a poem by Brian Doyle

In the news:

- Who's in the running? 12 names to watch to become the next pope
- Catholic bishops reject new contraception proposals
- What happens next at the Vatican
- Pope Benedict XVI leaves mixed legacy on clergy sexual abuse
- On Grammy weekend, Christian music bounces back