Tuesday digest

September 10, 2013

Subscribe by RSS feed: magazine, blogs, news. See all feeds.

New today from the Century:

- Paul Jeffrey on a moderate Islamic legacy in Mali: "Before the jihadists fled Timbuktu in February, they burned the city's ancient manuscripts. Except all the ones the residents hid." (subscription required)
- John Stendahl's lectionary column for Sunday, September 22 (subscription required)
- Steve Thorngate on whether being religious is bad for the economy

In the news:

- Pope kicks off reform mission in meeting with Vatican department heads
- Birmingham church bombing recalled with donation, medal