Monday digest

October 7, 2013

Subscribe by RSS feed: magazine, blogs, news. See all feeds.

New today from the Century:

- Lillian Daniel talks to Will Willimon about his novel: "'Fiction wasn't that big a leap for me,'" says Willimon. 'We preachers are all "artists" in the same sense that the Gospel writers were.'"
- Nelson Kraybill's annotated list of essential books on Revelation
- Patrick Keifert's essential books on evangelism
- Adam Copeland on the purpose of college
- Neal Plantinga blogs the lectionary: "Regeneration of stubborn human hearts has almost nothing to do with trying to clean ourselves up. Spiritual health isn't about repairing the repairable or improving the improvable."

In the news:

- When Catholic schools fire gay teachers, laity push back
- Pope Francis walks in the shadow of namesake saint in Assisi
- Winners and losers in the Pew Research poll on American Jews
- Jewish feminists say they'd accept Western Wall prayer compromise