

Thursday digest

November 7, 2013

Subscribe by RSS feed: magazine, blogs, news. See all feeds.

New today from the Century:

- Jon Sweeney on religious identity: "At a seder or shul, I am with my primary congregation—even though I'm not Jewish. And the fact that I'm a rebbetzman is not the only reason I attend." (subscription required)
- Steve Thorngate on the individual insurance market: "President Obama wasn't being honest when he said that if you like your health insurance plan, you can keep it. But that doesn't make Obamacare bad policy."
- MaryAnn McKibben Dana on Facebook and the problem of recency
- Mikeal Parsons and Heidi Hornik on Let Us Beat Swords into Plowshares (subscription required)

In the news:

- Supreme Court wrestles with how 'religious' prayer should be at public meetings
- Evangelicals stand by Doug Birdsall after dismissal from American Bible Society