

The most-read Then & Now posts

December 30, 2013

Here are this year's most-read posts from Then & Now, a weekly blog feature by historians of religion.

- 1) Molly Worthen on Billy Graham and the fracture of American evangelicalism
- 2) Kate Bowler on the American megachurch and the Christmas prosperity gospel
- 3) Randall Balmer on Exodus International and times when evangelicals change with the culture
- 4) Scott Poole on Satan in The Bible
- 5) Martin E. Marty on the mainline and moving from declinism to discovery
- 6) Kelly J. Baker on our habit of calling religions evil
- 7) Randall Balmer on C. Everett Koop and the religious right
- 8) Sarah Barringer Gordon on the other side of religious liberty and same-sex marriage
- 9) Matt Hedstrom on when the mainline told us what to read
- 10) Julie Byrne on Catholics who don't have popes
- 11) Matt Hedstrom on religion vs. religions
- 12) Yolanda Pierce on slavery and religious rhetoric
- 13) Margaret Blair Young on Mormonism and race