

Episode 9: Cláudio Carvalhaes

November 8, 2015

Cláudio Carvalhaes is associate professor of homiletics and worship at McCormick Theological Seminary in Chicago. Born in São Paulo, Brazil, he came to the U.S. as a “reverse missionary” through a partnership between the Presbytery of São Paulo and the Presbytery of Southern New England.

In this episode, Cláudio and Matt discuss liberationist preaching, what it means to be a missionary in the U.S., the unique perspective of immigrant preaching, and the difference between prophetic preaching and moralistic finger-wagging.

Use the player below to listen.