Etty Hillesum

by Sarah Rossiter in the May 6, 2020 issue

1914-1943

There's no containing what we call God, force-field of agape love, nameless, wild, omnipresent within the seed, the star, the sparrow, galaxies and grains of sand, limitless without exception, mystery beyond our knowing, beyond and in all sons and daughters, in those who show us how to live, stripped of self to flower forth, the desert blooms, the spark ignites the Dali Lama, Desmond Tutu, Rumi, Etty Hillesum singing, yes, singing, on the train to the camps.