

Prayer as weather moves in by Steven Peterson in the June 3, 2021 issue

Our house looks out upon a lake facing northwest some fifty miles southeast of Lake Superior.

Which means our storms throughout the year can be seen long before arriving, rising in clouds like mountain ranges.

I sit along our shoreline watching these storm fronts move and split and change to every color, every form.

I take a book; it might be hours until the weather will arrive.
And yet I find I can't read long because I'd rather read the sky whose author writes: Just take your time and watch. Now talk to me. I'm here.
