Sunday Morning Matinee · #92: Fast Five

On this last episode before summer break, Matt and Adam talk about their love for Fast Five, the dumbest and most brilliant of the Fast and Furious movies. Over the course of the show, they talk about what it means to be a family, they drink Coronas and toast to their families, then they plan a heist, and finally, by the end, they become family to each other. It's quite a ride.

Show note: This episode was recorded a few weeks ago, with the intention of putting it up for the second lectionary week of ordinary time. Then life intervened. We are dropping it now because it was a fun conversation and should be listened to by everyone who is intending to see F9 in a few days.
