

Little Bridges

by Jeff Gundy in the December 2022 issue for Mary Szybist, and after Rilke

God is in the space at the hub of the wheel, but God is not only there.

I think the spokes are like the little bridges we have built into God's domain, spun of almost nothing so they float, thinner than thought, among canyons and mountains, oceans and creatures, worlds and stars and galaxies without bound.

Those who feel their way along these bridges cannot go very far, and once they have tried they can never come all the way back.

But they do not seem to mind.
