

Eastertide

for Andrew Mead

I am watching a moose ripple out of his antlers.

I am watching Tollund Man, arm-in-arm with Judy Garland. I am trying to believe implausible things: that we too will abdicate, spurn bone crowns, and turn tender; that we too—raised, wide-eyed—will skip along gold roads. I am trying to trust that oldest rebuke, all things made new, beyond entropy. Above our urge to preserve.
